

6.1 HOTEL PASTEUR HUB HTTP://WWW.HOTELPASTEUR.FR/

The Pasteur building is a remarkable building located in the center of Rennes. It was built from 1888 by the municipal architect Jean-Baptiste Martenot and Emmanuel Le Ray and is fully invested in 1897 by the Faculty of Science who occupied it until 1967 to move to the Beaulieu campus.

In 2012 opens "the fairground University", a vast consultation on the "non-program" of Pasteur which translates into an ephemeral occupation of the place and feeds on the needs of the inhabitants. For nearly two years, Pasteur is "put to the test by use", that is to say, open to all those whose project is not necessarily "sated within conventional public institutions". By opening the building to all experiments that would not find their place elsewhere, the city hopes to invent a project that she would not necessarily have thought.

Until its start-up at the end of 2017, the Pasteur Hotel became a "project hotel" and welcomed, free of charge, between "an hour and three months", dozens of individuals, associations, schools or institutions wishing to leave their walls. Universes so far apart that they would probably never have met without this project. "The goal is to make visible invisible projects in the city". (Le Télégramme).

Following the building rehabilitation, the Hotel Pasteur will become a "shared schools" place including a child school, a numeric lab and a vast experiment site where actors coming from different structures and horizons are temporarily welcomed to develop activities. This practice of the Hotel in projects allows both to define the project architectural and technical from uses and test the principles of a future management which will have to involve Hosts of the place and different partners from the Pasteur Hotel.

This open approach to the place and project resulted in the creation of an "Assembly of Partners" which brings together, alongside the City and of Public Territories, those, natural persons or representative of legal persons, who hear contribute to the construction of the project and to the life of the place.

The project hotel life is also a research action carried out by researches from the various Rennes institutions. RSEI activities will take place within the Hotel Pasteur which will allow interactions with various actors from other domains and action-research development in axis 4 "Invent new participative strategies".
